The New Satanist

Chapter 1: The Space in Between

I had initially wrote this book with the sincere intentions to express a new doctrine capable of experimenting within the occult however, I have begun to report on a new social phenomena surrounding 'edgy' adolescents, 'sick' and 'demented' serial killers and self-righteous socio-cultural interpretations of surface reality and justice itself (i.e I lost any point in pushing a agenda).

For starters in the New Millennium generation or Gen Z era, we have two contrasting and conflicting interpretations of Satanism. One bringing us to the conclusion that Satan does not exist and one being that Satan is one to worshipped (in other words he does exist). Atheistic Satanism is a rather passive and philosophical representation and of course Theistic Satanism takes a aggressive and superstitious route. Personally, I have experienced both and watched the movements expand and change. The conclusion I have come to is that the MCoS, TST and CoS are mostly watered down versions of Satanism whereas the more traditional religious or 'spiritual' Satanism is often extreme revolving around blood magick, bodily fluids on sigils, hypnosis and even animal sacrifice (in some cases).

Another common characteristic of the Atheistic Satanist is PR campaigns, and though

I am not knocking them for trying to appear trendy or accessible for the common folk but I have labeled this interpretation of Satanism "watered down" for a particular reason. If you have noticed, there are major differences between the TST and O9A, CoS and ToS, etc. which is how far they are willing to go for this belief. More often than not, Atheists in all avenues of beliefs will not walk the line of religious superstition and rituals as bizarre as V.K Jehannum's or E.A Koetting's.

However, on the other hand E.A will go to the extreme of beating himself with leather straps to offer something to Asmodeus, a demon of the Goetia, in order to achieve a goal of his. People are more often than not disturbed by the extremity of these Satanic rituals and they have become rather distrustful of what these things offer. This is why the TST is so hellbent (no pun intended) on their PR campaign. So people usually try to find the space in between, a middleground to escape the more troubling aspects of religious satanism in exchange for some sort of achievement with the guarantee of independence unlike a faustian pact with the Devil.

There are some options then; Michael Ford, Aleister Crowley, white magic, some new age fusions, Carl Jung, and Paganism. All of these together have a less harmful connotation than the grounded 'cult-like' Theistic Satanism. Or that's what some think... These things offer an alternative to the harsh and dark aspects of the more traditional versions of satanism but compromised their beliefs to become more accessible to the people who want to stay in their comfort zone. So people search for a less risky and ultimately more complicated explanation to the tribulations of life and whatnot.

As a result we have these incredibly complex and long, strung out philosophical pseudo-intellectual quasi-'spirituality' masquerading as Satanism in order to decrease tensions among these other religions and be able to be practiced among the common folk. This is exactly what Christianity has become with their new age spiritualism that will be dead in the next few years I predict because of the ineffectiveness of their change. You could kill someone in this new version of Christianity, molest a child and conduct a terrorist act upon elderly women and even still you are accepted into the church and ultimately Heaven as long as you complete this baptism and say the magic words to receive salvation. Now Satanism will take the same route and it just takes something as simple as being essentially edgy or 'doing what you want' to become a Satanist. Really?

If so, then why not start your own little sect of Satanism and let's call it 'Cheeseball Satanism' where the worship of gouda is incorporated into our rituals and jack cheese is the evil spirit we call upon to assist us in our daily endeavours? That is complete nonsense but there are people out there who say that it doesn't matter if you worship the flying spaghetti monster seriously and wholeheartedly because essentially Satanism is all about 'Do What Thou Wilt' or doing what you want. If you think I am confusing Satanism with Thelema, think again because this is commonly said amongst the Satanists in the media when they talk about individualism.

I think this could fundamentally be changed entirely if we were to address the question of what Satanism really is, which is a topic in the sea of discussion I will touch upon. Then the idea of creating different versions of Satanism would be futile if it were well defined. But the problem is that Satanism is not well defined and indeed if you were to ask every Satanist what the deal is all about, they could give you a laundry list of answers all of which contradict each other in such a horrific way. But we are only touching upon the New Satanist and his or her little knockups including those common sects which people follow. The New Satanist is those of which whom incorporate eastern mysticism, skepticism, philosophy, new age and even Christian practices into Satanism to create some sort of frankenstein.

To which at least from what I have personally experienced (because yes, the author of this book has researched and even practiced the things stated in here) and seen is underwhelming and simply does not work. No offense to those occultists who work hard day in and day out to achieve their goals using those means but, clearly we can see that something isn't right with Gnostic Experimental Post-Post-Monotheistic Judeo-Christian Alternative Satanism or insert order/sect/philosophy of Satanism here. Satanism is becoming like Christianity, where there are too many denominations. There are currently around 43,000 denominations of Christianity and there are growing concerns that give or take a couple decades Satanism may suffer from the same. I don't think it will reach that number in actuality but it will definitely take some time before something similar happens. And no, it is not bad to experiment with the occult but there is a fine line between insanity or plain stupidity and the real deal. Here we go.

Chapter 2: A DVD Copy of Freedom

Hundreds of years ago, witches have been persecuted by religious zealots who themselves partake in the worship of a dead man who was found to be the idol of the Catholic Church. Sounds pretty extreme so far? Well, take into factor; unleashing a genocide upon humanity using a flood, burning entire cities into ash, battling giants, walking on water, turning water into wine than vice versa, turning women into pillars of salt and apparently unicorns. Now that's crazy! But we are missing one thing: The Devil.

One of the main counterarguments to Theistic Satanism is that he is apart of the mythology in Christianity and that it is apart of a folktale. Unless you believe in prehistoric Satanism where the Devil was a concept before Christianity was even born. After all Paganism and pre-Christian dogma was practiced before Paul established the first church. There we have a conflict.

Another belief is that Lucifer will win in the battle of Armageddon at the Apocalypse of Saint John or Revelations in the Bible. This is called Christian-based duotheism, and it comes to a interesting conclusion to say the least. These core principles are why exactly people cannot see Satanism be a helpful contributor to their life. It is simply put, too much for them. This is why people have accepted a more accessible and passive version of Satanism.

The worship of the ancient pagan Gods, like Venus and Jupiter are apart of this mixing and alchemical experimentation with different religious and occult practices. It is basically esotericism wrapped up in a adventurous light. It is like combining the aspects of monotheistic Islam with Taoism to achieve a more accessible version of esotericism.

Sufism, Rosicrucianism and even Freemasonry have achieved a level of middleground with the minds of the many.

LaVey's daughter once expressed making Satanism more mainstream contrasting her opinions on Satanism being only for the elites. Now she is taking a little bit of everything nowadays. Satanism is now making merchandise, having billboards (in the case of TST) and even after-school programs. It has become a universally accepted dogma like how homosexuals were persecuted once upon a time and now there are holidays dedicated towards lesbians, gays, transgenders and the sexually promiscuous.

Even Satan himself is commodified and fetishized, with prominent occultists illustrating and painting a image of a more generous and rational Lucifer. With the Gnostic interpretations being implemented within their doctrine. Better than a horned Devil spreading mischief and lies some think. And most certainly better than the 'House of Mourning' with the conservative baptist preacher. Yin-Yang, Dualism and Kabbalah all interconnected and interwoven into this makeover of Satanism.

Chapter 3: Hipster Invasion

When the new wave of post-punk, post-black metal and post- (insert genre here) happened, they've expressed scornfully that said genre was dead. New Age Satanism? More of the same. Taking the blue pill, maybe? Satanism is now about 'indulgence' and 'individuality', in other words hedonism with some rationalism knitted into the fabrics of ideological overdose.

A lot of credit goes to V.K. Jehannum, as I wouldn't have written this without him as he brought something to my attention that I have been ignoring for a long time. Since people are looking for the easiest way to live, as no one wants to suffer great afflictions in life and consequently search for purpose in religious or spiritual endeavours, they have compromised a great deal of what made said religion or spiritual belief what it was.

I have seen a bit of Satanists practice yoga, use crystals, practice rituals involving Jehovah and angelic beings (seriously, what the fuck is that? it needs to be said, sorry) then harshly criticize Satanists who practice traditionally like using blood and semen as offerings for demons, sigil magic, invocation and evocation

(not of angels), and necromancy. The irony of the situation is that they will be afraid of the consequences of doing outwardly Satanic rituals with demonic beings to avoid the punishment of the 'universe' or karma and what not. They wear ankhs, crosses, bracelets and strings to protect them from evil (the level of irony cannot even be illustrated by Andy Warhol) and most importantly negativity.

Now, for the most part this wouldn't be a issue if all of this was not Satanism, but they say it is. Even the most intelligent occultists in the past considered risk to be OK to take because they were essentially trying to improve their situation using 'alternative' methods. The modern day person who calls him/herself a occultist and more particularly a Satanist will not cross the line of obscurity, uncertainty and violence to achieve their goals. Hipsters were often said to confuse a subculture to restructure it into something completely different but this is unheard of. I'm afraid that this isn't simply hipsters infiltrating the gates of Hell and destroying the last remnants of Satanism but a more pressing discovery: a subversion of the Satanist.

Chapter 4: The New Satanist

People may be wondering what the title was all about, essentially it is a mini-book with a little bit of bias thrown here and there. People are flawed, this book may be rough around the edges but it does bring something important to the table: If It Isn't Broke Why Fix It?

Seriously, why must we completely change the face of a sacred deity commonly feared among many civilizations for its power? Why must we reinvent something which has worked for millennium in the age of information where people can formulate conspiracy theories surrounding Satanism or find the dirty details around it?

Do we really need to commercialize occultism and Satanism in particular? Do we need after-school programs for it? Do we need music to express our 'innermost deep feelings' about Satan? Do we need films on witchcraft and why people should be sympathetic towards Satanists because they're being persecuted?

If you answered yes to all of these questions then you have failed to realize something simple: NOBODY CARES. People are apathetic and cold about almost everything nowadays, I mean how many times have people expressed cynicism around rape victims in Hollywood? Right or wrong, it doesn't matter because it is the reality of the situation. The First Amendment allows for freedom of religion so don't worry about government persecution of Satanism. So if that is the reason why, then it is already settled.

People are skeptics, humanists, secular and irreligious at times. Satanism is a obscure thing, until now where the mainstream media has talked about it and even in Hollywood there are some who call themselves Satanist or wear Satanic imagery and regalia on them (more merchandising).

I'm genuinely confused is Satanism supposed to be made accessible to the public or reserved for the 'elite' as Zeena LaVey stated? A select few of individuals truly dedicated to the cause or accepting of all peoples including curious Christians and weirdos? This also brings me to the next question, which begs...

Chapter 5: What Is Satanism?

This is a important question because many have asked what this whole thing is about and people can't give a solid answer.

I have heard everything to 'do whatever you want', to the worship of the Devil outwardly, to individualism and rationalism to even full blown oppression and enslavement of all humanity to a horned Devil as of the likes of Euronymous. So this question divides people I see.

Instead Satanism is like the branches of a tree, which itself is not well defined and those different branches fight amongst each other to find a sort of conclusion to the question.

Theistic, Polytheistic, Thelemic and even Christian Satanists (yes, you heard me right) worldwide are selling the idea that their particular version of Satanism will benefit them when they cannot even well define the basis of their doctrine to their people.

No, instead you must be initiated and move through the ranks of their sect to learn the ancient secrets of Babylon and what Satan is... (oh wait, there is a library in our town?)

Are you saying there is a internet to research what Satanism is and we don't have to trust this sketchy Gen-X/millennial yuppie with a business model operating around his 'journey of enlightenment' and whatnot? OK.

There are plenty of resources to find out about even the most obscure things on the internet or if you are desperate then the deep web. Don't stop here because there is a limit even to my knowledge of esotericism, occultism and satanism.

Chapter 6: Which Path of Satanism is Correct?

I don't know. Ultimately speaking we are autonomous mammals with a thinking capacity to achieve and choose whatever we want and all of that jazz. The point was to shake up the occult community. However controversial the ideas covered in this document, it should be known that the FOKOSW is indifferent towards your personal beliefs because we believe that Satan will take it anyway he gets it.

Though the longer answer to this frequently asked question is, does it really matter in the end? For example; history has shown us that the most successful empires had sit upon many skull and bones to establish their position on the globe, usually with their devilish practices. Macedonia and the Roman Empire come to mind but most importantly Nazi Germany. You see Himmler was a occultist and the Waffen SS had incorporated ancient Norse-Germanic pagan and esoteric practices into their ranks.

The symbol of the Waffen SS is essentially runic magic, the Sun, not only that but mentioning the black sun itself which is another National Socialist symbol. Michael Aquino of the Temple of Set had talked about owning a knife of the Third Reich and often conducted rituals in their chambers.

This is a perfect example as the Nazis could be perceived as evil and their massive bloodshed across Europe could be interpreted as a blood sacrifice unto Satan, aware or unaware, intended or unintended. As radical as this is, it is not seen in the eyes of the Baphomet or some obscure demon in a lost grimoire. Lilith is often portrayed as a sexually wanton spirit for example and if you fornicate plus she is on her period, who is to say that the end result isn't a sex magick ritual given unto the goddess?

Furthermore there is some evidence surrounding Hitler being into Tibetan Black Magic and borrowed the swastika symbol from the Hindus' called the Hakenkreuz, another sun wheel revolving around sun worship.

This doesn't mean however that Hitler was a Satanist but it show how the more 'adventurous' and 'dangerous' aspects of occultism are to be enjoyed. With that being said, Satanism doesn't truly have a objective or objective sect but it does raise how far evil can go and to what benefits a person whether it be a Hitler or LaVey.

Chapter 7: Heart Over Mind Essentially...

Do you join a sect to express your interest in Satanism or practice on your own? If you join the sect, why preach individualism when you clearly do not practice it? You are essentially putting your trust into a man or woman who will tell you to engage in rituals to which you do not know, or have a full understanding in but you are telling us to trust you and more importantly these new doctrines you are providing us? I am a daredevil but damn is this some sort of insanity? And they say that the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again expecting a different result but in this case people try seemingly different things with a new coat of paint on it. Think about this; if I were to give you chocolate cake and change the icing everytime then say I gave you vanilla, and you wanted vanilla, would you be disappointed?

If we were basing this off of emotion purely and perception then I guess you wouldn't be disappointed but doing what some pretentious people do which is look at the picture from a different angle and pretend you see something different. In this case, there is nothing different, I just changed the icing and the same with these new and vast expanding void of empty versions and alternative sects of Satanism. There is nothing wrong with experimentation but don't pretend it is experimentation.

If I pray to angels but give blood to demons, then am I 'real' Satanist? If so, then why even call it Satanism? Now it has essentially lost its meaning. This can literally apply to everything including music, film, and other forms of entertainment. If you were to change some of the rules of basketball and deem it different but completely and utterly change the foundation of that game then it is not basketball. I don't see how Satanism can get the pass when these Christian Satanists and New Age Satanists are not even following the originators of Satanism in respects. There are not even influenced by them but rather repulsed by them and consequently create their own interpretations of Satanism.

This is what I was getting at with the accessibility of Satanism being challenged and made more mainstream with the invasion of music, capitalizing off of this newfound image of Lucifer and then changing the core foundations of Satan. What is the point of occultism if everyone knows it? Seriously. It is not esoteric if everyone can access it even to the point of wearing articles of clothing expressing your little belief. All of those little secrets in your sacred rites being revealed by 'whistleblowers' and people who say it was a cult or simply put you wanting to make money from the dogma and profiteering from it. What will you do?

So not only we use crystals and sages to 'cleanse' our homes and then invoke the moon goddess to protect us from the evils of reality but now this is commonly known among people and all you have to pay is $40 or in some cases $500 to be apart of this wonderful dogma? I think all of this could be summed up in the matter of hearts and minds, heart over mind rather since no one chooses to think about how unintelligent it is to combine elements of two opposing doctrines (or even more) to create a big mixed bag of occultic thought. It doesn't make sense. Stick to the basics. Don't fix what is not broken. Use your head. The Owl Spirit isn't coming to save you.
